Using Least to Most Prompting to Teach Cleaning Appliances and Doing Laundry

Objective: Cleaning Appliances and Doing Laundry

Setting and Materials:

Settings: A kitchen and laundry room in a residential unit, a community laundry facility, or a simulated apartment at school

Materials:
1. Specific task analysis checklists (see appendix A for an example of generic and specific task analyses)
2. Oven cleaner
3. Dish detergent
4. Sponges
5. Rubber gloves
6. Laundry basket
7. Powdered detergent
8. Measuring cup
9. Clothes

Content Taught

1. Cleaning an oven
2. Cleaning a refrigerator
3. Washing a load of laundry

Teaching Procedures

1. Gather supplies and provide the student with a written specific task analysis for the task to be taught.
2. Allow the student to perform the steps without coaching.
3. If the student is unable to continue, end the session and provide performance feedback.
4. Continue the above steps until the student performs all of the steps in the written specific task analysis correctly for three consecutive sessions.
5. After the student performs all of the steps in the written specific task analysis correctly for three consecutive sessions, begin the procedure for the next task.
Evaluation

Collect student performance data on the percent of correct independent of steps in the specific task analysis by recording the levels of assistance needed to perform each step (i.e., 1= independent and accurate response, 2= verbal cue and gesture needed for student to perform skill accurately, or 3= verbal cue and physical prompt need to perform skill accurately).
